

Alejandro de las Casas

Graduated from the University of Seville with a degree in pharmacy.
Master's degree in international commerce and MBA with agri-food specialty.

Throughout his professional career, he has worked in the export department of Aceites del Sur, an international Spanish firm that is a market leader in the marketing of olive oil, as well as the Pierre Fabre pharmaceutical group.

In 2007, together with three other partners, he founded Kimitec, a biotechnology company focusing on the research and development of natural solutions for agriculture.

He has overseen the company's international expansion to over 90 countries and helped established four delegations in the US, Brazil, China, and Latin America. In recent years, he has overseen the strategic management of new lines of business, in addition to the company's international management.